10 weekend retreats, over 2 years.

Accreditation process externally examined towards the end

Places require assessment process to ensure candidates suitability.

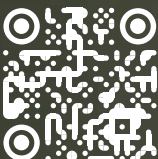

In what way is this different from other courses?

It is designed to be delivered in face to face modules every other month with sequential training building on skills and knowledge with supported practice in between.

It deals with growing the candidate's skills, knowledge, and themselves.

It enables graduates to apply for individual membership of the European Association for Supervision and Coaching.

It is suitable for people who work in the NHS, the caring professions, the armed and emergency forces, teachers, people wishing to change direction, politicians both local and national, those in the service industries. Anyone who is at a point of transition.

For more information and to book the course, please contact Julie.
